HAIR SAMPLE LOCATION:

- In preparation of taking sample, shampoo hair and rinse thoroughly with water. Preferably do not condition.
- Hair sample should be taken, using clean scissors or razor, from the nape of the neck as illustrated above. For the most accurate analysis, cut a sample no longer than 2-2½ inches (5cm) of the newest growth, regardless of length of hair.
- Using hair further from the root produces older results as hair acts like a time-line for the element content of the body. Using body hair can also show results over a longer period.
- Clean untreated hair is preferable as some chemical treatments can alter trace element readings. Untreated hair can normally be found under covering hair at the nape of the neck.
- Do not mix head hair with any other type of hair. If body hair is used, please seal it separately and mark accordingly.
- Place your sample straight into envelope provided and do not wash after cutting.
